Passage Across The Mersey

The River Mersey (/ ˈ m ɜː r z i /) is a river in the North West of England. Its name is derived from the Anglo-Saxon language and translates as "boundary river". The river may have been the border between the ancient kingdoms of Mercia and Northumbria and for centuries it formed part of the boundary between the historic counties of Lancashire and Cheshire.. The start of the Mersey is at the ...

In England, earthwork castles (both motte and bailey and ringworks) were constructed mostly in the hundred years after the Norman invasion. After this, most were gradually phased out, as they were replaced with stonework and as more time could be spent over a castle's construction (the natives being more friendly by this point).
